About the Topic:

In this chapter, the inconceivable magnitude of the whole universe is pictorially symbolized as a 'tree of life', which interestingly has roots above and branches below. This tree remains dynamic, growing only so long as it is rooted in the highest Consciousness Divine. The cosmos is then nothing but a manifestation of Consciousness in the different forms that we see. This highest Self is called the Puruṣottama and the one who awakens to that state is the one in whom all ignorance has been plucked out.
